imagine but few of your readers ever heard of this place, I had often read of the great whaling island of Nantucket, but this 'Sconsit, as they call it here, I never heard of—and yet it is over 200 years old, and only has a population of forty old, and only has a population of forty in the winter—but about 1,500 during July and August, as it has become quite a summer resort.

This is the most easterly part of Uncle Samuel's domain and it is about four hours sail from the coast or forty miles East of Cape Cod. Nantucket Island was discovered in 1602; was then inhabited by Indians; was first settled by the whites in 1660. The town of Nantucket was incorporated 1672, and soon after the people commenced the whaling business and continued it with varying success until 1890 when then the first Wednesday of that month. the people commenced the whating one iness and continued it with varying success until 1820, when they had 72 vessels in the business. Whale-fishing was profitable until about 1805, but the discovery of petrolum has rained their occupation, and now the island has not occupation, and now the island has not a whaler afloat.

A few old whalemen still live here, but they watch the sea and bewail these degenerate times. They live on fish during the winter, and on tourists and boarders during the summer.

Shark fishing is a popular sport here on the eastern side of the island. The Nantucket shoals extend out for perhaps thirty miles into the Atlantic, and sin many places the water is shallow, it is very dangerous for vessels, and a great many are wrecked here. Two ocean steamers have been wrecked here this spring—one soon went to pieces, but the other lies about a hundred yards from the shore with only the masts above water. far out at sea.

I do not know what kind of weather you are having now, but I do know it is too cool here in the shade for comfort.

Ladies put on their wraps and the men their overcoats when they walk out in the There is a strong wind con-their overcoats when they waik out in the evening. There is a strong wind constantly blowing, and it frequently increases to a gale. Then you ought to see the breakers. The bathing is poor, as the water is too rough and deep.

Strange as it may seem, they say they have little or no snow, which is supposed to be caused by the proximity of the gulf stream. The mercury gets down to about 30 in winter, and an average of 70 in the summer. So you may know they have a most delightful climate, and I think in a few years this place will be the most popular resort on the Atlantic. Nantucket has several elegant hotels and scores of handsome private cottages. 'Sconsit is a quaint old village. The boarders call it the patchwork village, and I think it deserves the title, for the houses look very much like the blocks in a crazy quilt. There are no streets worth the name-we would call them alleys—and such crooked ones! In strolling around you are as apt to fetch up in some back yard or kitchen as anywhere, as most of the alleged streets end in some such place. The old houses are all little one-story was different properties. The old houses are all little one-story was different properties.

kitchen as anywhere, as most of the alleged streets end in some such place. The old houses are all little one-story wood structures, and are covered and sided up with shingles.

But what a barren coast! You cannot see anywhere here a tree, not even a shrub the size of my lead pencil. There is a little short, wire grass trying to grow, but it looks as if it were discouraged. There are some trees in and around Nantucket town. They have a narrow guage railroad across the island from the pier at Nantucket, three miles to Satieide, then seven miles up the coast to time place, but they only operate it during the summer, and not always then, for sometimes old Ocean get his back up and buries the little road in the sand. In stormy weather vessels cannot land on the island, and consequently we are, at times, completely isolated for days.

My excuse for troubling you, Mr. Editor, with this communication is, that I have reason to believe that every con-sumer of Natural Gas in the city has signed just such a contract, and they are all equally interested with myself in holding the company to the contract.

Official Denials Quieted Things. New York, July 11 .- The Times says: Wall street was stirred anew yesterday with a revival of the reports of a settlement of the war between the cable com-panies. The story was all over the panies. The story was all over the street before the Stock Exchange opened, and men with opportunities to gain inside information vouched for it. The effect on the stock market was instantaneous. Not only securities like Western Union Telegraph stock advanced in price but the improved feeling spread all over the list and the Stock Exchange had a day of buoyancy such as has not been experienced in months.

Dispatches from London appeared later in the day confirming the reports current in Wall street, and few people presumed to doubt the truth of the story till in the afternoon "official" denials began to creep out.

In the hotel yard lies a whale's head. Id did not measure it, but it must be five feet wide and longer than wide. In strolling around I saw a girl of a very peculiar color and appearance, and, upon inquiry, I learned that she belonged to a family of Sandwich Islanders, who had come to Nantucket on a Whaler some years ago.

This island has a length of about fifteen or eighteen milesand three in width at the widest place. The sail here from the coast is a most delightful one in pleasant weather. The vessel crosses Vineyard sound, touches Cottage City on Martha's vineyard, then crosses Nantucket bay to the island.

Even in calm weather the swells cause the steamer to roll and many passengers become sick.

Natural Gas Contracts.

Natural Gas Contracts.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer:
Six:—On the twenty-eighth of August, 1886, 1 signed an "Application for the supply of gas for fuel." This "application" was signed also by the Vice President of the Natural Gas Company of West Virginia, in accordance with the printed requirement of the paper and thereby became "binding" on the company. The "application" is repeatedly called by the company a "contract," and the following words are almost the last in the "application": "And if the use of gas be continued on the premises after the 1st of April, 1887, without a new contract being made, then this contract shall continue in force for another year thereafter, and so on from year to year."
